

Definition: Actor

“Rock and roll your way to commercial acting success!”

128 Immigrants Can't Be Wrong!

Seasoned Professional
“Andy” Milder

Veteran Performer:
Evan Arnold

“I owe my career to Definition: Actor!”
—Tom Hank

*No, Tom, we owe you! Rock and roll, T.
You're the best. Love, “Andy” & Evan.*

“Inspirational”

We now wish to be partners in your future success—no longer obstacles to your dreams!

“Motare et Volvere”

www.definitionactor.com

818.990.9532

Who left the cookie in the cookie jar? Guess what... We all did! But don't beat yourself up! That's why there's Definition: Actor! We'll help you to keep it loose, keep it real, and always rock and roll!

In fact, our most successful clientele have used our commercial acting training to make money without even booking! We will teach you how to hang around just out of sight for over an hour! Imagine, thirty-dollar checks coming in the mail every day, seven days a week. Go ahead, let the casting director and clients pay your Definition: Actor tuition for you! We won't tell! ☺!

New Advanced Classes

Sabotage: Destroying the psyche of your colleagues, opponents, and friends!

- Make “harmless” chit-chat harmful!
- Tell lies about the clients. (Por ejemplo: “They want it big.” “They're really nice” or “They do want the second song.”)
- Sign others out late!

Breakdowns: Your agent's been lying to you. Now you can prove it!

Using Murphy's Law to your advantage:

How buying a non-refundable plane ticket is your guarantee of succe$$!

When not to go to auditions high

Parking

When to give up completely (Includes living with your parents, getting a roommate, hooking, welding, and more!)

Cursing with Pytka®

Advanced Complaining: How to almost get sympathy from people outside the business. Wild!

New: New Classes

Voiceover (and Modeling*) Classes

If you can speak words out loud, you can do voiceovers! If you can't, you can model! Learn the subtle differences between these two seemingly indistinguishable crafts.

- Never again get caught in the confusing “mic”/“Mike” trap! Hint: One is a person's name.
- Talking “louder” vs. talking “softer”.
- Free map of Burbank!

Commercials, Movies and TV: How to tell the difference. And why!

NEW: Bonus Class

History of Commercials: From ad-lib to improv. MWF 2:50-3:20 (3 units).

Introduction to Definition: Actor: Don't waste all your money before you're ready. This preparatory class teaches you all the different payment options we accept.

*Neither “Andy” nor Evan have modeling experience, but they assume it's easy, so they're teaching a class!

This is our worst class, and we cannot recommend it.

New Testimonials

“Definition: Actor is changing the face of the business. No other class is full, and teachers who were formally raking in the cash are now out in the cold. Damn them and their brilliant, brilliant class!”

—What one of our competitors might be thinking.

“I can always tell which actors have been to Definition: Actor”

—Lynn Stalmaster

“You know that time you waste while the Polaroid’s developing? Now I make the most of that time.”

—Clint Culp

“I was a shallow person, then I took this class.”

—Brian’s Ex-Girlfriend

“Your cat is ready.”

—Petco Grooming

“I used to go to Church. Now I go to Definition: Actor.”

—A really hot chick, who, by the way, is still in our class and is looking for that special someone...

This space intentionally left blank.

“I really didn’t like this class.”

—Chris Dollard

Okay, you need to know that this guy came in with a really bad attitude. As a general rule, we don’t like to use foul language, but Chris Dollard was a total asshole. He came to our class as a working actor, and now it’s our fault that he can’t book??? Please. I’m shocked the guy ever booked in the first place! He hasn’t the slightest clue about the craft of commercial acting...if he had ever heard of the term “beat” it had completely different connotations, if you know what we’re saying. He was lazy and, for a circus clown, not really that funny. How many houses can you get off of that same schtick, Chris? Four? He also wasted a tremendous amount of class time pretending he wasn’t gay. In a mature attempt to rectify his misconceptions, we repeatedly attempted to “out” him...but to no avail (or even a call-back—ha ha). The guy was gay. We’re talking 3-dollar bill, Japanese sunset, queer. His unwillingness to admit this truth wasted over 64% of our class time for three full months! It not only annoyed our straight students, it was insulting to our gay students. Then, he bounces a check! Chris, it’s your responsibility to listen to us, not our responsibility to “please wait three days before cashing it”! So, of course we told the class about it and he felt this was “inappropriate”. Oh, you mean “inappropriate”, like, say, bouncing a check? Now, needless to say, we don’t like everybody in our classes, and sometimes we take video home from the class and mock it in front of friends and acquaintances, but we felt that we should at least respect his money, if not him. So, fine, we can work with the guy, but let’s be honest: We don’t have to like Chris Dollard. Ask yourself: Would you like a guy who always came early and never missed one single class in three months. Honestly, who can do that? Get a life, Chris. Get a friend who can hang out on a Wednesday. Oh, and I bet he’s all like: “Sorry I can’t hang. I have to get to claaaaass”. Now, we know our class is unquestionably the best in town, but, between us, after your third session, you can skip a class or two. Hell, you can skip a lot of classes. It makes you look cool and gives us less to do. Hey, we’re all trying to do what we can: Network, pick up chicks, whatever. So stop badmouthing our class, Chris. We’ve never said anything unkind about you, and we would appreciate it if you would return the favor. Rock and roll!

FAQs

- Q) When I’m told “casual” dress, what should I wear?
A) Good question. It can be anywhere from jeans to dark dress pants. The in-depth answer is given only in our class...the “F” in “FAQ” doesn’t stand for “Free”.
- Q) Do you get paid for being “on avail”?
A) Maybe. Why? Are you on avail?
- Q) I’ve been told that you don’t really teach a class and that your brochures are a joke. Is this a joke or is this real?
A) This question really upsets us. We have worked very hard on this!

Can’t speak English?
Use it to your advantage!